

Medical Researcher Travel Award

The Medical Researcher Travel Award (MRTA) incentivizes excellence in scholarly medical research by defraying medical student travel costs associated with presenting accepted research abstracts for oral or poster presentation at professional medical conferences.

To be eligible for the MRTA award sponsored our Office verify that you are:

- A Texas A&M School of Medicine single-degree medical student (M1-M4) in good academic standing.
- Ensure that you have not obtained prior MRTA funding in the previous academic year (July-June) to the submission date of your MRTA application.

MRTA applications will be judged by faculty committee based on quality of the research project, professional development impact, and financial need. The rubric is posted on our website. Awardees will be honored and asked to share their MRTA award testimonials in our Medical Scholar Research Pathway Program (MSRPP) website.

MRTA Application Documents

1. Dated documentation that shows that the MRTA applicant research abstract was accepted to a national medical conference during the period the MRTA award is offered. To specify, the Fall MRTA selects abstracts that were accepted from July to December while the Spring MRTA covers abstracts that were accepted from January to June.
2. Submit written documentation that substantiates that you have received a formal invitation to present your research at a conference scheduled during the semester that your MRTA is submitted for consideration (e.g., email, letter).
3. Include a copy of the original abstract as pdf file, that you submitted and was accepted to the professional medical conference.

All MRTA documents (including this form, conference original abstract and invitation from the conference organizers), must be submitted via email to COM-MD-Research@tamu.edu with a copy to program coordinator, Dr. Selina Nigli (nigli@tamu.edu) by the posted deadline.
